WEATHER KEY POINTS

09/23/21 - 09/29/21

Thursday-Wednesday

- It will remain warm and mostly dry, and generally lighter winds are expected for late week through the middle of next week
- Another round of offshore winds is possible for parts of northern California on Thursday, which may lead to locally elevated fire weather concerns.
 - A window of some gustier north to northeast winds is likely across the northern Sierra and Sacramento Valley Thursday and Thursday night, when fire weather conditions may become locally elevated.
- Periods of isolated to scattered showers and thunderstorms are possible across the mountains of southern California and as far north as Mono County Thursday through Saturday.
 - Details are relatively low confidence and showers/thunderstorms will likely be isolated, but the most likely locations for storms are along the High Sierra and across the interior mountains of Southern Region. Most locations will likely remain dry through the week.
- A storm system moving into the Pacific Northwest will likely bring some rain to northern California next Monday through Wednesday. Confidence in the details of precipitation totals and timing is still on the low side at this time. Little or no rain is expected south of a Bay Area - Lake Tahoe line with this system.
